City council kicks judges, others out of reserved parking spots

Conway has 15 days to remove signs near courthouse

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

County officials — including Anderson County's district and circuit court judges — might find themselves circling Main Street in the weeks to come to find a parking spot close to the courthouse.

County Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway recently received a letter from the city council to remove the county's reserved parking signs on Ollie Bowen Street.

The same reserved parking signs, city council member Ken Evans said, that were never authorized by the city to be placed.

At the council's June 11 meeting, Evans asked the council members to view photos taken of Ollie Bowen Street, where several county officials currently use reserved parking spots by the courthouse.

Evans cited the experience of one elderly resident, who recently told Evans she had tried to go into town

Recycling to get easier this fall

County will use grant funds to place containers in locations around city

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Recycling efforts in Anderson County will take a mighty leap forward this fall, thanks to a state grant and the efforts of the Anderson County Environmental Committee.

The state announced last week that the county will receive a $125,291 grant, enough to fuel plans the committee has worked on since it was formed last April by the Anderson County Fiscal Court.

The funds will be used to purchase equipment as well as trailers that will be placed around Anderson County, allowing residents to drop off recyclables at their own convenience.

"Things are getting ready to happen," said David Steedly, an Anderson County resident who helped spearhead moving recycling efforts here out of the Stone Age and into the Age of Enlightenment.

The committee is still finalizing locations for the trailers, which

Church erects steeple to point worshippers toward God

By Ben Carlson

If worshippers feel small when they walk into Goshen Baptist Church, that's just fine with Pastor Fred Knickerbocker.

They are supposed to, thanks to a new steeple that was erected atop the church last Friday morning.

Knickerbocker said the steeple, which is graced at the top with a gold cross, makes people feel small by design, but not in a negative way.

"The closer [the steeple] gets to Heaven, the smaller it gets," said Knickerbocker, who has said grace since 1977 over what is believed to be Anderson County's oldest church.

"That's the same as your relationship with God. The closer you get to God, you realize how small you really are."

The church's age belies its beauty. Nattily kept with

Report questions psych drug use at Heritage Hall

Watchdog group claims drugs given to keep patients subdued, costs down

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A watchdog group claims that a local nursing home is administering antipsychotic drugs to residents without a psychosis or related condition in an effort to keep staffing costs down.

Kentuckians for Nursing Home Reform cites a nationwide study by the federal government that reveals nearly 1-in-5 residents at Heritage Hall without psychosis or related condition received antipsychotic drugs.

The study was conducted by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services and released by last month by The Boston Globe.

"It's a growing problem in nursing homes that would choose to administer knock-out pills rather than hire sufficient staff to take care of these residents, mostly victims of dementia or Alzheimer's disease," said Bernie Vonderheide, a spokesperson for Kentuckians for Nursing Home Reform, located in Lexington.

"Those persons slumped over and sound asleep in their wheelchairs at your local nursing homes often times just don't happen. They can be victims of the misuse of antipsychotics."

Jim Alexander, a spokesperson for Elmcroft Senior Living and Memory Care in Louisville, which operates Heritage Hall, said the data don't take into account why physicians sometimes prescribe the drugs.

"There are valid reasons why a physician may choose to prescribe a medication such as anti-psychotics without a diagnosis of psychosis or related condition such as controlling a patient's anxiety over a specific disease process," said Alexander. "The statistics quoted do not take into account this very important decision process made by the patient's personal physician."

"We do take our responsibility very seriously as it pertains to the care and comfort of our patients,"

"All medications including anti-psychotics administered to any patient of one of our skilled and rehabilitation centers is always prescribed by their personal attending physician.

"We constantly work with our nursing staffs, the patient's physician and our pharmacists regarding the type and

According to a letter sent to the judge-executive, the city council wants the county to remove its reserved signs on Ollie Bowen Street in order to make more space for senior citizens who need to park close to the courthouse.

PARKING

to purchase a license plate at the courthouse, but could find no place to park.

"The handicap signs, I have no problem with," Evans said. "What I think the only way to stop this is to take them down."

Evans said Bowen Street was a city street, and that officials could park elsewhere, such as in the city lot behind the courthouse.

He asked that a letter be sent to the county to take down their reserved signs in 15 days to make those spots open to the public.

"I think if we let the county get away with dictating what goes on our streets, we don't even need to be meeting," Evans said, addressing the council. "We'll let the county take over."

Council member Thomas Vaughn seconded the motion, and it passed 5-1.

Goodlett, the single dissenting vote on the measure, said he didn't know if the letter to the county was the solution to the problem, if there was a problem to begin with.

"Well, I thought it was a little premature to send the letter at the time," Goodlett said in an interview last Friday. "I thought we needed to have a little more discussion."

Goodlett said he knew there had been previous discussion on the county taking over the road from the city, but was not sure who maintained Ollie Bowen Street itself.

Evans, in a follow-up interview, stated that putting the Bowen Street issue on the council's agenda was not an act of retaliation against the county.

"No, I didn't feel it was my place to approach the county," Evans said after being asked if he spoke with any county officials before bringing up Bowen Street at the council meeting, "as I said, they didn't approach the city about putting them up, so why would I approach them about taking them down?"

Conway said by June 29 the county will take all the reserved signs down.

"As an elected official, I took an oath to work and treat all of the citizens of this county the same," he said in a statement released to The Anderson News. "Therefore, I don't want to cause any problems for our senior folks with parking on Ollie Bowen."

"By June 29, we will have all reserved signs down. I'm going to do whatever it takes to work with all government entities for the betterment of people of this county."

County officials who currently have reserved parking include the county clerk, the circuit court clerk, judge-executive and the district and circuit court judges.

According to Sheriff Troy Young, the decision to reserve parking spaces for judges was made when the sheriff's department moved out of its old facility in August 2011.

"With us, that's about the best we can do," Young said of courthouse security for the judges. "As far as I can speak for the judges, during trials or any other type of hearing or anything else, it's always best to keep a judge in close proximity just for security basis."

"It's going to be a little tougher for [judges] if they've got a trial scheduled for them to be circling the block."

Jailer Joani Clark said she did not originally receive a letter regarding the city's request to remove the reserved parking signs, for inmates are transported to and from the courthouse in a van, which parks on Bowen Street.

She then called Mayor Edwinna Baker to inquire, and learned from Baker that the city will designate a parking spot for the jailer's van close to the courthouse.

"I think they all understood the necessity of keeping that van close," Clark said of city officials.

"We'll wait and see what's going to happen next," Evans said, when asked if the county would take down the reserved signs.

"We'll wait to see what happens in 15 days."

Both Mayor Baker and city clerk Robbie Hume were absent from the June 11 council meeting.

will be hauled to the county highway garage when filled and eventually replace the need to use a large garbage truck and other county vehicles for curbside pickup.

Steadly said locations so far include outside of public school buildings, Walmart and Ace Hardware, although other locations, including outside of the city, are possibilities.

The funds will also purchase a compactor, skid steer loader and other equipment to process recyclables.

Steadly said the committee's initial goal was to encourage residents to recycle and reduce the amount of landfill waste. Long-term goals include energy and water conservation.

For now, though, he said he would love the number of Anderson County residents who participate in recycling increase from a paltry 5 percent.

"We have to make it convenient and easy or people just won't do it," he said.

Currently, residents can get their recyclables collected by the county at no charge, but have to store the items and remember to place them at the curb one day each month.

With the trailers, residents can drop off recyclables whenever they choose.

Steadly said he hopes to have the trailers operational by September. He said curbside pickup will continue for a period of time as the committee works to educate the public on where the trailers are located and what can be placed in them.

Currently, the county recycles aluminum

Want to recycle?

Residents can schedule no-cost curbside pickup by calling 839-3471.

Items can also be taken to the county highway facility, located on Versailles Road near the animal shelter.

Residents can also dispose of appliances and carpet at the highway facility, along with yard debris and materials other than common household trash at no cost.

Hours at the recycling center are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon. The center is closed Wednesdays.

cans, plastic containers and all paper products. It also offers carpet recycling at no cost at the county highway facility, located on Versailles Road near the animal shelter.

Another long-term goal, he said, is to make recycling not only cost-neutral for taxpayers, but eventually generate money for the county.

"If you look at the people we have, what's recyclable and the amount of money we can get from those things, there's no reason we can't generate money to support the program, and even extra money for the community."

Steadly said the cooperation the committee has received from local government and the business community has been tremendous.

Steadly and others approached the fiscal court last year and expressed concerns that the county had never bothered to apply for recycling grant funds that have been used to build centers in several neighboring counties.

That sparked the court to form the committee, which has met monthly since that time.

use of medications administered."

According to the federal study, the median use of antipsychotic drugs in nursing homes across the country is 16.7 percent. Data show of the 89 residents at Heritage Hall at the time of the study, 19.8 percent received the drugs despite being without a psychosis or related condition.

Across Kentucky, 161 of 280 nursing homes were over the median number, according to the study.

The drugs, which are supposed to be administered by prescription, are ordered by doctors at nursing homes but administered "off label," Vonderheide said.

"They get a supply of the drugs through a pharmacy and are supposed to be used according to label directions," he said. "What is suspected is that many nursing homes use them off label because they know the drug will put Mrs. Jones to sleep for four or five hours."

"The label didn't say to use them to quiet people down or make them sleep."

He added that dementia patients are often disturbed or can become violent and require adequate staffing to control them.

"It's expensive to hire more caregivers," he said. "That is the single biggest problem in nursing homes — the lack of caregivers — and this illustrates that further."

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services has announced that it will attempt to have states crack down on misuse and reduce by 15 percent the number of who don't need the drugs but are receiving them, according to a news release from watchdog group.

Vonderheide said that's not nearly good enough.

"A committee has been formed in Kentucky and will meet next week," Vonderheide said. "The committee membership is heavy on industry lobbyists and nursing home representatives and state bureaucrats. Only two or three persons on a conference call by CMS were consumer reps, among them a representative of Kentuckians for Nursing Home Reform.

"It's like the fox guarding the hen house. But we will be watching them, and believe me, they need watching."

Meet Gary

It is my pleasure to introduce Gary (10/98). He's a friendly, personable young man. He said he would like people to know that he's smart, he likes basketball, he likes school, he likes art, especially drawing, and he likes to read. He recently read the Hunger Games books. Gary has a good sense of humor, and says that he usually does best around older kids, because sometimes younger ones get on his nerves a little bit. He also likes things to be very neat, unlike some of the other boys his age that he's been around. Gary likes action movies, and playing video games, such as Mario Kart. He likes to go out to Dairy Queen or Rally's and likes hot wings. When he gets his allowance, he's very careful how he spends it, trying to stretch his money as much as possible. Gary enjoys watching various sports and he likes to play board games. Gary has a great deal of potential to be more involved, he just needs more opportunities. Please consider making this great guy a part of your family!

gleaming white siding and fresh paint, Knickerbocker and the other Goshen faithfuls have spent time and money keeping the church and its grounds ship-shape.

Missing, however, was a steeple.

"We've been improving our property for years," said Knickerbocker. "I stood in the middle of the road one day and said while it's a very beautiful building, the one thing it lacked was a steeple."

"We wanted to complete the church properties and make it look completely churchy."

That prompted Knickerbocker and church members to approach Campbellsville Industries, an offshoot of the days when Campbellsville University made steeples at the school.

Workers there provided six examples of steeples, and church members eventually decided on one they liked.

Knickerbocker said he's pleased with the results.

"The steeple points to the fellow we're most obligated to — God. He's the one we are there worshipping."

The church will celebrate its 200th anniversary this fall and is located at 1544 Hickory Grove Road.

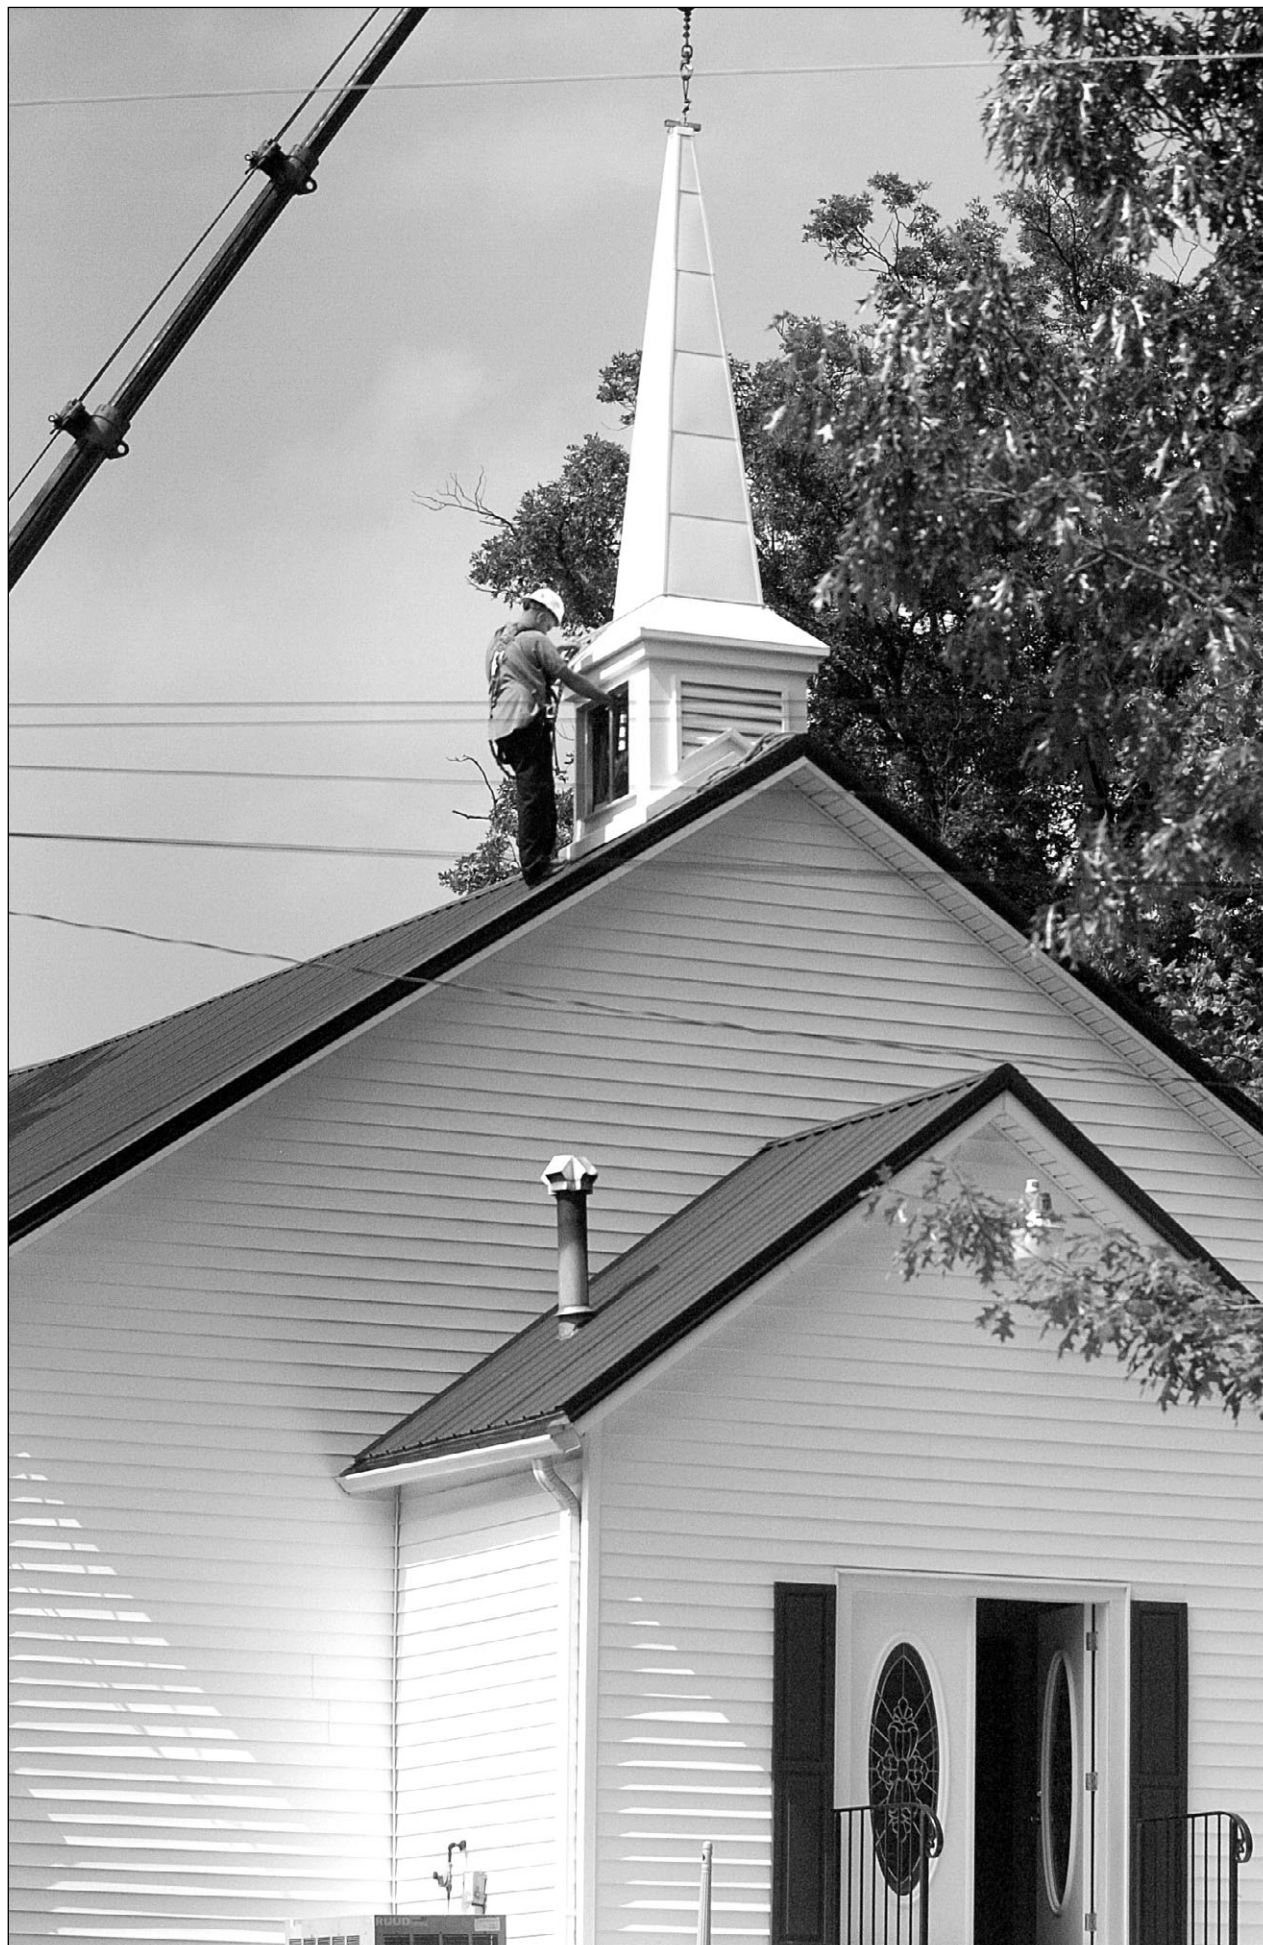

Sunday school begins at 10 a.m., followed by a worship service at 11. Bible studies are held at 6:30 p.m. each Wednesday.

Knickerbocker said visitors are welcome and should expect a no-frills, traditional service.

"A lot of churches are blended or have contemporary services," he said. "We don't. We sat down seven or eight years ago and decided to do what we do best, and what we do best is traditional worship with hymnbooks and a piano."

"I'm not a screamer, I'm a Bible preacher."

Meet Lawrenceburg's Hatfields and McCoys

Only time will tell if 'City McCoys' accept yet another attempt by 'John Wayne Hatfield' to halt senseless feud

Have you seen latest television series about the Hatfields and McCoys? If not, don't bother searching it out in reruns because a battle here between city and county government is remarkably entertaining — even without all the bloodshed.

For our purposes, we'll make the fiscal court the County Hatfields and the city council the City McCoys. (You'll find out why shortly.)

Like the famous families, the County Hatfields and City McCoys have been locked in battle for years, and no one is absolutely certain exactly what caused the ruckus.

We do know it's a safe bet that Judge-Executive John Wayne Hatfield never pulled a cart loaded with hogs past City Hall, only to have Mayor Edwinna Baker McCoy accuse him of swiping one of the city's hogs.

Litter abatement money, yes, but no hogs.

But there have been numerous skirmishes, the latest being last Monday's decision by the City McCoys to have their attorney, "Perry Cline" Myles, send a letter to John Wayne, kicking him and other county officials out of the reserved parking spaces they've had for years near the county courthouse.

In typical McCoy fashion, the City McCoys (council member Sandy Goodlett McCoy being the exception) drew their guns without thinking and, in their zeal to fire on John Wayne, ended up making it riskier for the district and circuit court judges as they enter and leave the courthouse.

Not they care; the City Hatfields were just trying to get even with John Wayne after he refused to hand over their share of state-provided litter abatement money.

They'll deny it, but it's true, and claim John Wayne withheld that money as retaliation for the City McCoys breaking a years-old handshake deal to trade water line easements in the Hatfield's community park for free water and sewer from the City McCoys.

Well, the City McCoys broke that agreement a month or so ago, and, yes, John Wayne was none too happy. But did he take it up a notch over the litter money? No, he simply allowed the McCoys, who forgot to apply for the litter money, to suffer the consequences of their incompetence.

Their grievances go even deeper, and are composed mostly of petty disagreements that have spiraled out of control.

And that's a shame because, like the little McCoy girl who was gunned down by Hatfield supporter Cotton Top as she fled her daddy's home, none of this was really necessary.

When he took office in 2011, John Wayne made nice with the City McCoys, even offering to let them have a say in how the 911 tax money cell phone users pay is spent. Unlike the previous judge-executive who wouldn't let the City McCoys have a dime, John Wayne formed a committee of Hatfields and McCoys to figure out how to best spend those funds.

They got along famously and bought all sorts of new gizmos, but it wouldn't be long before talks started of actually merging the Hatfield and McCoy families into one form of government that both remounted their horses and rode back to their respective encampments to settle in for war.

That is until now. Those who expected John Wayne to blow a gasket and come out blazing over last week's reserved parking decision were just wrong.

Instead, like his predecessor Devil Anse, who allowed Cotton Top to hang to end the feud, John Wayne took what he called the high road and vowed to work as best he can with the City McCoys and simply remove the reserved parking signs on Ollie Bowen Street. Like Devil Anse himself, it's a certainty the John Wayne had plenty to say, but bit his tongue in an effort to end the feud.

It's up to the City McCoys, now, to determine if the ceasefire will last.

Don't bet on it, folks.

Where sidewalk ends, city's responsibility begins

Look closely at where the sidewalk ends.

If you're like me, you usually don't think about the short drop where the concrete curb's lip meets the street.

For Anderson County residents like Lovada Melser, sometimes you're forced to think of nothing else.

Melser, who lives in one of the Breckenridge Estates apartments off of US 62, describes herself as an independent woman.

It bothers her to have to ask people for help, she said.

Occasionally, she and another Breckenridge residents who travel onto Broadway via wheelchair will cross US 127 together in pairs, for safety purposes.

But if one of the wheels on her motorized wheelchair gets stuck on the curb and she's alone, Melser's got a hard decision to make — rolling down the hill or going into the street.

Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

"I try to take all the side roads I can, but it's not easy," Melser said, adding that many of Lawrenceburg's streets could use an update for accessibility, including North Main and Safe-fell streets.

I'd have to agree, although I understand what an undertaking it would be.

Updating all of the city's problematic sidewalks to make them more accessible for our handicapped and disabled residents would not be a cheap project.

That doesn't mean it can't be a priority for city projects in the future.

It definitely hasn't been cheap for the state transportation department, which recently began work on two Lawrenceburg routes to be completed by Aug. 1.

Both sections of Main and Broadway will cost more than $680,000 for sidewalk repairs, including $38,281 for handicap accessible sidewalk ramps and detectable warnings for the visually impaired.

With an $8,800 decrease in funding for the city's street See DOWNs, Page A5

Lawrenceburg had more valedictorians and salutatorians than any other county that had students there. Anderson County students were recognized as the smartest of the bunch. We were all athletic and had captains of the football and basketball teams, as well as cheerleading squads.

Lawrenceburg.

The Lincoln Institute campus had 450 acres. We had an agriculture department, home economics, carpentry, plumbing, electrical engineering, industrial arts and nursing. Each student had to learn a trade before graduating.

We had close to 500 students on campus. There was a girls' and boys' dorm, and several daytime students who rode the buses each day from surrounding communities.

This is information on my high school days. For those who wondered at the time where we went when summer was over, now you know.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No more 'yes' men, woman for library

To the editor:

I read your column in last week's paper about the way our property taxes are divided and think most of us can agree that while the library is very useful and we all love it, the expense is outrageous.

This is a classic case of abuse of our tax money. I recently went to a library board meeting and it took me about five minutes to identify the problem. It's the board.

These folks are doing the best they can, but there are no accountants, bankers business owners, etc., on it.

The library tells them what she wants and gets it.

When we asked questions, one of the board members spoke up and said, "Well, nobody here has volunteered to serve on the board," which is a false statement because a successful business owner had volunteered but never considered.

It was told that a person must be a friend of the library to be considered, but let's face it.

Why would the librarian choose someone who will not bow down to her requests; someone who knows about running a business and cares about where our taxes go?

Why would the librarian choose someone who will not bow down to her requests; someone who knows about running a business and cares about where our taxes go? The answer is simple: she wouldn't.

The answer is simple: she wouldn't.

Please correct me if I'm wrong, but as far as I can tell there is not a single thing we can do about it.

I think some eyes have been opened since the health department catastrophe, and all the money the library gets from us, but what good is it if we can't even have a say about how our money is being spent?

Volunteer enjoys volunteering here

To the editor:

I spent the past week working with the Kentucky Changers in Lawrenceburg and at Open Hands Food Pantry.

I have never worked before, giving food to the needy. It truly blessed my heart.

I had the privilege of praying with 60-plus families and passing out prayer rocks.

Please, Anderson County, donate food and money to the pantry. Director David Montgomery is doing an awesome job, but he needs your help because he can't do it alone.

I look forward visiting again. The first place I stop will be Open Hands because I want to be a volunteer there again. It changed my life forever, and I promise volunteering there and giving will change your life, too.

Rebates are out there, you just have to try

In April I mailed in a rebate request for a garden hose I had purchased locally.

I received a postcard stating that I had forgotten to send in the receipt and had a couple of weeks to return it with the postcard attached. I was lucky to find the receipt quickly. It cost two stamps and less than 10 minutes altogether to get the $10 rebate.

Did you know that many rebates go unclaimed? Consumers don't complete the forms either on-line or through the mail. Others throw away the box with the bar code on it.

I had a good experience with the bar code issue, too. I've found that being polite and clear about what I would like to have happen helps.

This example is one that is frustrating on the family side and a great experience on the business side.

My daughter bought a new laptop. She shopped on-line for the best price and then decided to go the store to buy it so she wouldn't pay shipping.

The store would transfer data from the old laptop and the price was the same. A $75 rebate was offered either way and sales tax was paid on both. The cashier gave my daughter a receipt (two of them) a rebate form and instructions.

My very happy daughter got the computer out of the box, started using it right away, threw away the box and took the computer back to the store to transfer the files from the old laptop.

Did you notice a step that she left out?

The people at the call center (800 number) couldn't do anything to resolve the issue. I talked to the store manager. He agreed to try to do something if she would bring the receipt back to the store. She did and got the $75. I think the adage of nothing ventured, nothing gained worked in this case.

The next experience was the easiest resolution I've ever had to a small consumer problem. A company that makes rather expensive water bottles had a liberal warranty. A bottle would be replaced if it leaked.

The college mascot bottle cracked when she accidentally dropped it on the driveway. The company would replace the old bottle, in a color of her choice, but would not be able to replace it with a college logo. All she had to do was take a photo of the bottle, showing the name brand, describe the bottle as large mouth or regular and list how many ounces it held. She e-mailed the photo and description to the company. The replacement bottle arrived in less than a week.

The final example involves a rebate on home appliances.

When I purchased a new refrigerator last November, I didn't know that a rebate would be offered by the electric company.

I had stapled the receipt inside the warranty/instruction book and filed it away.

Last month I learned that local electric companies were giving rebates for Energy Star appliances purchased since Nov. 9 2011.

My refrigerator fit the plan so I will be getting a $100 rebate. It only took 10 minutes to find the receipt and complete the rebate form.

It might be worth your time to spend 10 minutes to get $10, $30, $75 or $100 back. All of the businesses involved were responsive and I had success with little effort involved.

Break out the hose and watch your garden grow

Summer is official here and that means the real fun is about to begin. Cabbage, potatoes, and squash should be gracing dinner tables everywhere, and beans, corn, cucumbers and tomatoes aren't far behind.

While I love my winter casseroles, summer food is my favorite.

Keeping vegetables fresh takes some doing. Most everything but tomatoes will store in the refrigerator. I keep beans in a paper bag in the crisper drawer. Everything else gets the dirt knocked off and thrown in by themselves. Wait to thoroughly clean your vegetables until you're ready to cook and eat them.

All this good food signals the time to start seeds for the fall garden. Fall crops are a little easier to grow than spring, although they're the same crops. All the flying pests have had their gluttonous feast and are not near the problem that they are in the spring.

You can start broccoli, cauliflower, kohlrabi, cabbage and a ton of different types of greens as seeds in the garden or in pots on the porch. When September rolls around, hopefully after you've preserved all the summer crops, you can start harvesting from your fall garden.

Maintaining the flower garden becomes more work this time of year. Azalea, rhododendrons and oak leaf hydrangeas need a little fertilizer for acid-loving plants about now. The mums need to be pinched back, again.

Everything in bloom now will benefit from some general fertilizer, with a big middle number. They bloom better with additional phosphorous.

Spring bloomers that have had their leaves yellow and die back, can now be dug and divided. Add some bone meal to the hole when you replant them.

Mowing is a constant event and lack of rain may again be an issue this year. Keep your grass at about 2 to 3 inches to help keep moisture in the soil. That way you can focus your watering time on the garden.

It's these drought periods that later present as cracks in tomatoes, so water an inch a week if we don't get the rain. Mulching the garden with newspapers and straw will keep moisture in the ground and reduce your weeding time to a minimum.

Remember to water the soil, not the plant.

This is also the time when problems seem to present themselves in the garden. Cucumber, squash and melon plants look great one day and wilted and dead the next. It's that dreaded cucumber beetle.

Take a close look at your plants. The beetle is black and yellow stripped and the only control is to keep them off.

Baby powder sprinkled on the plant helps keep them off, as does spraying with smelly onion and garlic water. If you have plants that were hit, pull out the dead plants and put in a new one.

Now, get out there and enjoy a little vitamin D from the sunshine. Lay the hose in the garden and pull up a lawn chair. Watch the garden grow. I guarantee you'll come up with ideas to do it better next year while you water. If your memory is anything like mine, you better have a pen and paper handy. Happy growing.

department for the upcoming fiscal year, however, don't expect an entire overhaul of the city's sidewalks anytime soon.

Apparently the city has tried to receive funding for accessibility updates, according to public works director Larry Hazlett, applying for a grant (later denied) that would renovate the sidewalks near the Anderson County High School.

In my opinion, trying for accessibility just isn't good enough.

Any building that has been constructed, renovated or altered since 1992 needs to be compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act. Many of our buildings, including city hall and the Anderson County courthouse, are accessible according to ADA regulations, but many of our streets are not.

According to Mayor Edwinna Baker, the city homeowner is responsible for maintaining sidewalks in front of property not owned by the city.

That may be true, but there are other avenues the city could pursue.

According to a city ordinance passed in 1989: "It shall be the duty of each owner of property

Furthermore, subjecting physically disabled citizens to a literal maze of cracked sidewalks and dangerous drops into the street is not only unfair, it's degrading.

in the city, within fifteen (15) days after the receipt of the notice provided for in Section 91.61 to repair, at his own expense, all holes, uneven surfaces, and other defects in the sidewalk on which his property abuts, as specified in the notice."

But the state of the city sidewalks is not the same as citing someone for overgrown grass in the front yard.

It's dangerous.

If the city is unable to fix the problem directly, at least make more of an effort to use the channels the city has established.

I don't think that's an unreasonable request.

According to the same section of the city ordinance, if the owner fails to comply, "the city may effect or cause to be effected the repair of such defect in the sidewalk, and the same shall be done at the expense of the owner of the property."

Furthermore, subjecting physically disabled citizens to a literal maze of cracked sidewalks and dangerous drops into the street is not only unfair, it's degrading.

Melser said one well-meaning bingo player this past winter called the city police to see if they would block traffic so that Melser could travel safely home.

According to Melser, the officer told her it'd be better if she stayed home and did not go to bingo.

"Well, no, I'm sorry," Melser said. "You need to make the sidewalks better."

"We have as much right to ride around as anyone does."

By all appearances, it's unclear if the city agrees.

Finding more than distilleries on the Bourbon Trail

Two business owners promote homegrown arts and craftsmen

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Travelers with a taste for the arts can find more than liquor on the Bourbon Trail.

Ask two Lawrenceburg business owners — art connoisseur Brenda Gardner and potter Susan Burge — who opened two studios on Bonds Mill Road in the hopes of attracting tourists (and locals) to support Kentucky art.

Burge, a former painter turned potter who has been making pottery for about 15 years, had been selling her clay pottery out of her barn on Johnson Road and participating in art shows for years.

That is, until she saw the property next to Four Roses distillery was available and for sale.

"It was either do it now, or not," Burge said of her decision to open up her own studio in late March. "It just kind of laid itself out there to me; it seemed like it had a lot of potential."

Burge said she gets a mixture of people entering her shop, both Bourbon Trail tourists and Anderson County residents.

"They're bringing a lot of people through here," she said of the local Anderson County distilleries. "People are doing the Bourbon Trail big time now."

And in Burge's case, she hopes people will be into "doing pottery" big time.

Burge said her studio — which includes crash courses at the pottery wheel for groups of four, a four-week extended course, or paint your own pottery — offers visitors a chance to create work they can call their own.

"You can go and buy a mug from Pier One for $5, but it gives them a sense of how much practice it takes," Burge said of those who choose to take a pottery class. "There's a lot of time involved."

The time it takes to make a piece is also the appeal of pottery for Burge.

"It's very relaxing," she said, "and you can't think about anything else than what you're doing at the time. I love the feeling of the clay."

The shop doesn't just offer pottery and art classes, but also vintage finds, furniture and other Kentucky products.

Burge said she'd eventually like to offer wine by the glass to be purchased and enjoyed on her front porch, and is currently working on obtaining her liquor license.

"I would love it if we could encourage everyone to think about shopping local and buying handcrafted gifts when they need them," Burge said.

Brenda Gardner, owner of the Hair Clinic, Frame Clinic and the Art Emporium, wanted a place to showcase local artists and their work.

She had already had experience in collecting art for the Anderson Humane Society's annual art auction and garden party, she said.

"I realized how many people we have here, and they had no place to display their wonderful work," she said.

So about a year ago, Gardner opened the Art Emporium, located just down the road from Burge's studio.

"I feel like if I don't do it, who's going to do it?" Gardner said about opening an art gallery and shop on her property. "Arts shouldn't die in any community."

About 22 out of the 34 artists Gardner works with at the Art Emporium are from or currently living in Anderson County. Gardner's oldest artist is 70, and the youngest is 13, and her studio offers sellable art from photography to watercolor paintings to stained glass to felted hats made out of llama wool.

Gardner said she doesn't have a favorite kind of art, but she does enjoy photography, especially her brother-in-Both Gardner and Burge said they can meet interested parties by appointment.

For more information, contact Gardner at 502-680-1801 or Burge at 502-357-0093. Burge also has a website at www.elementsclay.com and Facebook page at facebook.com/kyelements.

law Gary Ritter's nature work.

"He just gets in there with them; you feel like you can get in there and touch them," she said.

Gardner said the Art Emporium also benefits from its location off of the Bourbon Trail, for she can recommend restaurants in town, and other activities or places visitors may be interested in.

"Let people see what this county's about," she said. "We're so much more than just bourbon."

Gardner is also a painter — several of her still life paintings are displayed in her home — and said her mother's theory was "if it holds still, paint it."

"I see art in everything," Gardner, who also works as a hairdresser at the Hair Clinic, said. "I see it in the hair I do; it's always been a passion of mine."

The Art Emporium will be sponsoring a photography show at Talk of the Town on June 23, and Gardner said she is looking at expanding the Art Emporium building, which also houses Gardner's framing shop, by about 868 square feet.

"It's just something I believe in," she said of supporting local artists. "I believe these people need to be recognized."

Comment at theandersonnews.com.

Gardner, a painter herself, said she sees art in everything.

Radio hams converge here this weekend for national event

From staff reports

Anderson County's "hams" will join thousands of amateur radio operators by showing off their emergency operations June 23-24 in the county park, according to a news release.

This annual field day event is the climax of the week-long amateur radio week sponsored by ARRL, the national association for amateur radio.

Using only emergency power supplies, ham operators will contact emergency stations in parks, shopping malls, schools and backyards across the country.

Over the past year, the news has included reports of ham radio operators providing critical communications during unexpected emergencies in towns across America including the California wildfires, winter storms, tornadoes and other events worldwide.

During Hurricane Katrina, amateur radio — often called ham radio — was often the only way people could communicate, and hundreds of volunteer hams traveled south to save lives and property.

This weekend, the public will have the chance to meet and talk with Anderson County's ham radio operators and see for themselves what the amateur radio service is about, according to the news release.

Showing the newest digital and satellite capabilities, voice communications and even historical Morse code, hams from across the country will hold public demonstrations of emergency communications abilities.

Their slogan, "When all else fails, Ham Radio works" is more than just words to the hams as they prove they can send messages in many forms without the use of phone systems, internet or any other infrastructure that can be compromised in a crisis, according to the news release.

An estimated 35,000 amateur radio operators across the country participated in last year's event.

Locally, amateur radio operators have helped with public safety needs including shelter operations during ice storms and severe weather, along with safety during the Burgoo Festival and managing parade route traffic.

Amateur Radio Operators in Anderson County have helped with such Public Safety needs as shelter operations during ice storms and severe weather to communications and safety during the annual Burgoo Festival to managing parade route traffic.

2012 Fair and Horse Show features new pageant

From staff reports

The Lawrenceburg Fair and Horse Show, in addition to a variety of horse shows, also offers another kind of competition — pageants.

For the 140th Fair and Horse Show, one new pageant is being added to the schedule of events — the Mrs. Lawrenceburg pageant.

“We’ve had interest over the last couple of years, hopefully, within the next couple of years, we’ll be able to send our winner to the Mrs. State competition,” said pageant organizer Carolyn Cole.

Kicking off the week will be the Miss Teen pageant at 7 p.m. for ages 13-15, followed by Young Miss, ages 10-12; and Princess, ages 8-9.

Monday, June 25 features the Miss Lawrenceburg Fair and Horse Show, ages 16-20 at 7 p.m.; Ms. Lawrenceburg, ages 21-25; and Mrs. Lawrenceburg, for married women of any age.

Tuesday, June 26 features the Under 2 boy and girl pageants at 6 p.m., with sign up occurring the night of the show.

Wednesday, June 27 features the 2-year-old baby show at 6 p.m., with sign ups starting at 5:30 p.m.; the 3-year-old Wee Miss and Mister pageant at 6:45 p.m., with sign ups starting at 6 p.m.; and the 4-year-old Tiny Miss and Mister pageant at 7:15 p.m., with sign ups beginning at 6:45 p.m.

Thursday, June 28 will close the week of shows with the Little Miss and Mister pageants for ages 5-7.

All starting times are subject to change if pageants run late.

Winning pageant contestants will be eligible for the Kentucky State Fair pageant.

For more information, contact Carolyn Cole at 502-680-1438 or visit the pageant page at www.lawrenceburgfair.com.

HAROLD AND MAUDIE PREFERRED MILKIN' BY HAND

THE WAY WE WERE

By Janie Bowen
News staff

I recently took a drive down to the Van Buren Boat Ramp at Taylorsville Lake and as I drove along Pleasant Grove Ridge, I was flooded with memories.

Of course my grandparents, Robert and Emolyn Searcy, lived in the heart of Van Buren before Taylorsville Lake came about, so I have traveled that road many times.

However, one of those memories had to do with a story for June Dairy Month.

There aren't enough dairy farms left in Anderson County to celebrate dairy month now, but 30 years ago was a different story.

As I was traveling along, I came to the Harold and Maudie Waldrige place. They, along with the old barn and little yellow house, are gone now, but I will always remember my visit with them.

So when I was compiling the information for 30 years ago on the "Way We Were" page this week, I ran across that story and decided to re-run it.

Harold and Maudie Waldrige preferred milkin' by hand
By Janie Buntain

As I drove down the winding road called Pleasant Grove Ridge, I came to the new highway being constructed because of the Taylorsville Lake project.

I was lost for a few minutes but finally pulled into the driveway at a small yellow farmhouse belonging to Harold and Maudie Waldrige. As I was running a little late, they were already getting the cows in at quarter to three in the afternoon.

Walking toward a dark-haired woman with a stick, I made my way to the old barn. "Get up next to barn, Harold will be coming with the cows and part of 'em will go in here and the others like to go around to the other end," she said.

Following the cows into the barn, we walked over to the side where the cows are milked. As Harold fastened the cows in the stanchions, Maudie got ready to feed them.

Unlike the modern day stanchions, chains are used for their cows to keep them in place. The barn has poles holding tin up for a ceiling in the milking part and serves as a hay and tobacco barn.

"I guess we ought to fix the place up, but I keep thinking I'm gonna quit. I've milked cows all my life and probably will till I pass away. Then I'll have to quit," laughed Harold.

"We tried milkers once before, but didn't think the cows did as good so we went back to milkin' by hand. We milked by hand for 35 years. You see we're all bent over don't ye? That's why," said Harold.

They went back to milkers only when they had to because of their health and their youngest son quit helping them. It takes about an hour to milk 14 cows. They have a total of 25 in their mixed herd.

"We just have a few of our cows named. There's Freckles, Spot and Cross. I guest we named her that 'cause she's mean," laughed the congenial farm wife.

The Waldriges ship about 500 pounds of grade C milk every other day to Dairymen Inc., in Harrodsburg.

Harold hauled his own milk when he shipped in cans across a National Farmers Organization picket line during the NFL strike several years ago. "People said they might hurt me, but they didn't do a thing," he said.

The 65-year-old Anderson County native and his wife have milked cows together all their 44 married years.

For the Waldriges, the milking and cleaning up of the milkers is a 50-50 job. At morning Harold cleans up the milkers while Maudie gets breakfast. After breakfast, about 8 o'clock, they go back to bed. In the afternoon, Maudie cleans up the milkers and Harold goes to the house and watches Andy Griffith. He says he thinks Barney Fife is some-thin' else.

Both Harold and Maudie come from large families. Harold has 12 brothers and sisters; and Maudie, 13. They have five children. The oldest son, Gayle, is a farmer in Shelby County. The others are Bonnie, GERALINE, Marie and Darrell. They have 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Harold went to the third grade in school. He said. "I never went half the time then. I was raised on beans and taters and had work with a hillside plow and a team of horses."

He doesn't call Maudie by her name. He just calls her wife. "I'll tell you something he calls me and I don't know why and I don't like it. That's Miss Ollie," exclaimed Maudie, "so I just call him Mr. Ollie right back!"

"I do that cause it makes her rare a little," Harold said grinning.

Harold says he'd rather milk than fool with tobacco.

"I lease mine out to my brother. I got tired of lookin' at it. I'm proud to get it off the place," he said.

They cut and bale their own hay on the 200-acre farm. "He used to shock it and pick it up with a pitchfork and wagon. I used to ride on top of the wagon and he'd scare me to death," said Maudie.

Farming has been the Waldriges' livelihood except for three years that Harold worked for the state. He decided he didn't like it, quit and went back to "just farming."

"I used to work as hard as I could, but I take it a little easier now. I found out you ain't gonna take nothin' with you and you might as well get all the breaks you can," he said.

God, not you, is responsible for success

As I sit here this overcast Sunday afternoon, pondering and praying I will provide a message this week that will glorify God, my mind drifts to faith.

Jess Thompson
Faith columnist

Just exactly who do you and I put our faith in? How often do I pray and thank God for his blessings, yet in the back of my mind I still comfort myself with my own achievements and possessions.

After all, what accomplishments or material items do I have which were not given me by the almighty God, my creator?

Yet I often reflect on how much money I have in my checkbook, knowing my bills will be paid.

It's comforting to know I can make this month's house payment because I have worked hard and earned the money. It's important to be very careful here. I have earned the money to pay my bills only because God blessed me with such, not because of my own achievements.

I have a close friend who always refutes me when I say "God blessed me." His response is always maybe so, but you worked hard or made good decisions yourself. Therein lies the mistruth. I am nothing without God. There is no myself. Every aspect of my life is molded through God's blessings and his grace.

When Jesus stood before Pilate, who had the ability to take his life or free him, Jesus told him, "You would have no power over me if it were not given to you from above." -John 19:11.

God has full authority over your life whether you chose to believe or accept it. Pilate was able to sit in judgment only because God allowed it.

As Christians, we must put our full faith in God and allow him to control our lives. Anything less is a lie. When bad things happen to you, do you cry out to God? When good things happen to you, do you cry out to God? Where is your faith?

BAPTISM AND THE SINNER

There are those who teach that Baptism is not necessary for salvation. But in contrast to this false doctrine the New Testament teaches that:

1. Baptism stands between the sinner and salvation – Mark 16:15-16
2. Baptism stands between the sinner and forgiveness of sins – Acts 2:38
3. Baptism stands between the sinner and the benefits of the death of Christ – Rom. 6:3
4. Baptism stands between the sinner and the new life in Christ – Rom. 6:4-6
5. Baptism stands between the sinner and having a good conscience toward God – 1 Pet. 3:21
6. Baptism stands between the sinner and being in Christ – Eph. 1:3; Gal. 3:27
7. Baptism stands between the sinner and being able to be called a Christian – 1 Cor. 1:12-13
8. Baptism stands between the sinner and being in the church – 1 Cor. 12:13

These are a few of the reasons that the sinner needs to be baptized. This is not an arguable subject, Jesus said do it, and that should settle the issue (Matt. 28:18-20). Settles it for me!

Critic praises Four Roses

Four Roses' 2012 Limited Edition Single Barrel Bourbon was ranked number three on Paul Pacult's list of the 140 Top Five-Star Spirits in the World for 2012, the distillery announced.

F. Paul Pacult, renowned liquor industry critic, named Four Roses' 2012 Limited Edition Single Barrel Bourbon a five-star recommendation, the highest possible.

The bourbon was bottled at barrel strength and consists of a 12-year-old recipe coded OESK, one of the 10 uniquely handcrafted bourbon recipes produced by the distillery. The OESK recipe encompasses a spicy, full-bodied flavor characteristic.

"Deliriously luscious scents ... abound in the opening sniffs after the pour," wrote Pacult. "Entry is satiny smooth, delicately corny sweet and fruity; midpalate is profound, multi-layered, corn cereal sweet and honeyed. Aftertaste is long, buttery and bittersweet. Fabulous."

Four Roses' 2012 Limited Edition Single Barrel Bourbon was released in April with a distribution of approximately 4,000 bottles.

For more information about Four Roses Bourbon, visit www.fourrosesbourbon.com.

A guide to making sports even better

If I could take a Louisville Slugger and turn it into a magic wand, I would wave it over sports as we know it and make the world all good. You know what I mean. Every year would see the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series, the Boston Celtics in The Finals, the Kentucky Wildcats would go to the Final Four and the Dallas Cowboys would be in the Super Bowl. Not win every year, mind you. Gotta take a little of the bad to make the good taste even better, you know. Sorry if you are a fan of the Steelers, Yankees or Heat, but this is my column and those are my teams. Of course, the world would be perfect if at least one Anderson County team wins a state championship every year.

But, c'est la vie. That has never happened in a KHSAA-sanctioned sport.

Really though, there are some things that would make sports better for all of us. Here they are in no particular order.

1. More and more superstars would be like Joey Votto and Brandon Phillips.

I am not talking entirely about hitting around .360 or turning in some highlight reel defensive play - starting a double play with a between the legs flip? Are you kidding me?

Yes, the Reds are my team and have been since before the Machine moved to Riverfront Stadium. So, with that in mind, I admit some bias, but to see the two most popular players in Cincy sign long-term contracts before the season was heartening. In an age when guys make unheard of sums of money to play a game, only to put their services up to the highest bidder whenever possible, it was a breath of fresh air to see DatDudeBP and Votto commit to stay where they have to become local heroes.

Make no mistake, they are being paid handsomely and both wanted market value, but to see a commitment to the Reds - and vice-versa - is good for the game.

Chances of it happening often: About the same as Dusty Baker and Derek Lowe exchanging Christmas presents.

2. Parents become as interested in their kids getting an academic scholarship as they do regarding athletic opportunities.

It never ceases to amaze me how many people seem to think an opportunity to play sports in college equals a full-ride, tuition, books, room and all the trappings.

The fact of the matter is that even at the highest collegiate level, Division I, there are more people on partial athletic scholarships than full rides. It varies from school to school, but most sports scholarships are partial.

At smaller colleges, full athletic rides are rare. Usually, when a player goes to college for free there is some athletic grant money and a combination of academic and need-based grants.

That being said, it is great to dream, and there are some fortunate people that do achieve that dream. But let's be realistic. The odds of earning a large academic scholarship are far greater than getting a full-ride athletically.

Chances of parents, or kids, changing that attitude: About the same as Barack Obama dumping Joe Biden for Rand Paul. But as long as people think Junior is going to be the next Durant, Votto or Luck, there will be misplaced emphasis on athletic scholarships.

3. How about doing away with athletic scholarships altogether?

A writer friend told me once that he longed to cover the Ivy League. You know, Princeton, Harvard, Yale and their buddies. It was for that very reason.

OK, I will get off the high horse and acknowledge the fact of athletics do provide opportunities for some kids who might work hard in the classroom but even the best is not enough to qualify for academic aid. Those kind of kids really do get opportunities through athletics and that is good.

Chances it happening: About the same as Bill Gates hitting the winning 3-pointer in the NBA finals.

ESPN Golf Challenge coming to Lawrenceburg

Local course to host first round of national tourney

From staff reports

The worldwide leader is looking for Lawrenceburg's leader on the links.

The ESPN National Golf Challenge is coming to Wild Turkey Trace Golf Course on Saturday, June 23. The tournament tees off at 1 p.m.

The challenge is a series of elimination tournaments for two-man teams that will end with the national finals, to be held in Las Vegas, Nev., Oct. 18-20.

The local tournament is part of the first round of the challenge. Five teams that survive the cut will move on to regional competition at either Greenbriar, in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., or Hillcrest Country Club at Batesville, Ind. Last year, more than 12,000 golfers competed in the challenge, which encompassed more than 300 golf courses nationwide.

The tournament will be divided into gross, net and senior divisions. The senior division is for players, age 55 and older. Teams are open to men and women and can be two men, two women or one man and one woman. Net and senior players must have a USGA handicap.

With a minimum of 30 teams, $200 will be awarded to the winning team in each division. A runner-up prize of $100 will be awarded for the net division.

The cost for the local tournament is $80 per person with lunch provided.

For more information, contact Wild Turkey Trace at 502-839-4029 or wildturkeytrace@dcr.net.

Alves goes west to begin chase of coaching dream

Anderson native running Portland team while learning the ropes

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Jordan Alves has taken Horace Greeley's advice to a new level.

The young man has gone west. Like 2,360 miles, give or take a few singles, west for his first job as a head baseball coach.

The Anderson County High School graduate is coaching with the Portland Baseball Club organization. As in Portland, Oregon, the town Alves was probably more familiar with as the hometown of former Kentucky basketball player Terrence Jones than a place that would give him his first chance at running the show on the diamond.

But he's making the most of his chance.

"I am head coach of one of the 14-and-under teams and I am an assistant coach with all of the other teams," Alves said in an e-mail last week. "When my team isn't practicing or playing, I am at the other teams' games."

The organization is part of the growing trend toward summer travel teams, like Lawrenceburg's Central Kentucky Mudcats. "It is very similar to the Mudcats," Alves said, "but instead of one team, there are four. There are two 14-and-under teams and two 18-and-under teams."

Alves has taken to running a club like a home run hitter to a breeze blowing out.

His club has a 27-15 record through Sunday's games but has gone 22-8 since Alves arrived in town after finishing his season working as a student-coach with the Campbellsville University team.

So far it has all been about hard work and doing one's best, the traits that made Alves one of the better players on Anderson County's back-to-back regional championship teams in 2008-2009.

And some might think it is weird to have a young guy giving the signs from a third base coaching box.

"It isn't as much weird as it is gaining respect," Alves said. "With me being only 20 years

Brown shines as Mudcats team opens strong

From staff reports

The Central Kentucky Mudcats' 15-and-under baseball team has gotten off to a good start, going 4-2 in its first week of summer action.

"This is a group with a lot of talent and to this point are showing that they may be figuring out the rest of what it takes to win. There are a lot of positives so far," said coach Chris Copenhagen.

Last Monday, the Mudcats split a double-header with the Frankfort Capitals, a 15- and 16-year-old team that includes players from three high schools. Josh Brown gave up one hit over six innings to earn a 3-0 victory in the first game. "Josh just pretty much dominated the game on the hill, giving us a great start to the summer," Copenhagen said.

The Capitals came back to win the second game 10-9, overcoming a strong outing from pitcher Tanner Walker, who took a 9-4 lead into the fifth inning before getting tired.

Mudcat pitching proceeded to hit two batters and walk four, all of which scored for the Capitals.

The Mudcats went 3-1 in last week's West Jessamine tournament, losing to the Morse Mustangs of Danville in the first game, but coming back for three wins.

Wesley Jorette, Mason Hardin and Mason Baker all pitched well against the Mustangs, but Jorette took the loss in a 6-4 decision. Hardin and Jorette tripled in that one while Brown doubled.

The Mudcats rebounded with a 13-3 win over West Jessamine with Jorette getting the win. He, Hardin and Brown all had big days at the plate, according to Copenhagen.

Kyler Campbell gave up just one hit in four innings and Daniel Whalen came on to finish things off as the Mudcats routed Owen County 17-1 in a five-inning game. Brown, Jorette, Chris Sea and Dusty

4. The Kentucky High School Athletic Association has uniform alignments for all sports.

This probably will never happen across the board, simply because most sports compete in one class, but a few (namely football, track and cross country) have multiple classes.

But, part of what drives interest in sports at any level are rivalries. Kentucky-Louisville. Red Sox-Yankees. Cowboys-Redskins.

And, until two years ago, Kentucky's best-kept secret, Anderson County-Shelby County.

The SEC recognized that with its new basketball scheduling. The powers that be designated a "rivalry game" for each team. Major League Baseball has done that for years in its goofy inter-league play concept.

High schools need to do the same. Thankfully, it looks like the KHSAA is heading in that direction. Not all sports have the same setup, but with soccer going to a new alignment this fall, basketball, baseball, softball, volleyball and soccer are roughly the same. That's good.

From this corner, it looks like having one alignment for single-class sports and one for multi-class, especially football and track, which are so dependent on numbers, would be the way to go.

Chances of that happening: Very good. It just might take some time.

5. Speaking of rivalries, Kentucky should play Indiana. All sports. Period.

It made little sense to discontinue the football rivalry several years ago, but at least, both schools offered plausible explanations.

It makes no sense to stop playing basketball. This one was special and for many years was the top inter-conference rivalry in the nation, hands down.

Forget whoever is on the schedule now. Buy them out and get UK and IU back on each other's schedule. Play it on the bridge between Madison and Milton, if you want.

Just play it.

Chances of it happening this year: About the same as Billy Gillispie and Kelvin Sampson leading the Big Blue and Crimson and Cream.

Chances of the future: Who knows?

SHOOTOUT SUPREMACY

The Central Kentucky Batcats 14-and-under fast-pitch softball team took first place at the National Softball Association Young Guns Shootout on June 10 in Lexington. The Batcats went 6-0 in the tournament, scoring 49 runs while only allowing 8. Team members are, front row, from left: Mia Aldridge, Kylee Kearns, Kaci Currens, Abby Goodlett and Tara Phillips. Second row: Ariel Dailey, Sammy Rogers, Katelyn Harrod, Bailey Curry, Allyson Moore and Courtney Gale Hawkins.

Mudcat softball team takes third place in Lexington tournament

From staff reports

The Central Kentucky Mudcats' 12-and-under softball team took third place in the Young Guns Shootout, held in Lexington the weekend of June 9-10. The local travel team defeated Lebanon, Ohio twice, split with the Cave Run Muskies, but lost to the Eastern Kentucky Vipers. The Mudcats defeated the Jinx 2000 to win the consolation bracket and take third place in their first tournament of the summer. Team members are:

Mattie Copenhaver, Cheyenne Searcy, Gracie Inabnit, Jessie Peavler, Alee Rowland, Keelie Courtney, Darcy McRoberts, Megan Megahey, Makayla Rice, Loren Hahn, Taylor Gillispie and Kyleigh Lay.

MUDCATS

Puckett all had big games at the plate for the Mudcats.

The local team also pounded out a 12-0 win over Boyd County as Brown went the distance, giving up one hit and walking no one. He did hit two batters. Brown struck out five. "He is just having an outstanding summer on the hill for us and could challenge for our No. 1 starter on the varsity next year."

Copenhaver said the entire Mudcat lineup pounded the ball against Boyd County.

Team members are Baker, Jacob Brown, Josh Brown, Campbell, Hardin, Jesse Howard, Jorette, Andrew Mitchell, Puckett, Sea, Worth Sparrow, Brett Thompson, Walker and Whalen. Coaches are Copenhaver, Jeremy Turpin and Nick Satterly.

old, I have players who are 13-18 and they are being told to try something or do something from someone who looks younger than them.

Some of the young guys look up to me because I played college ball and now am a coach at the college level. Some of these players are Division I guys and I had to gain their respect and show them I know what I am talking about."

It really should not be a surprise that Alves has gravitated toward coaching. As a player, as far back as being one of the main cogs for Anderson County's Little League state tournament team in 2002, through two regional championships at the high school level to working at Campbells-ville, Alves has always had the label as a coach on the field.

"I am not saying I know everything, because I don't," he says, "but I have learned from coaches who are successful and that is my goal. My forte, so to speak, is base-running and fielding. I was always a good base runner and solid in the field, so that is what I focus on a lot with these guys.

"Playing hard and hustling on and off the field are the things I feel like are huge and go unnoticed by many. It's all about respecting the game."

So far, Alves has been trying to instill that love of the game into a group of kids from the Portland area. They play home games at Clackamas Community College in Oregon City and play weekend tournaments throughout Oregon and Washington.

"The playing level of the 14-and-under teams are either average ball players or above-average players in their age group. There are a few players I coach, that I feel like can be really good ball players. And then there are some that are going to be just average high school players, but they all have improved in the first month I have been here.

"The 18-and-under teams have a lot of really good players. I have seen pitchers who are throwing from 85-93 MPH, and are committed to good junior colleges in the Oregon-California area. I have seen guys who run 6.7 seconds in the 60-yard dash, which is FAST. Some of these players have very bright futures if they stick with baseball.

"There is even a catcher who is committed to Campbellsville. I have worked with him a lot with catching and trying to get the comfort level there before he comes on campus."

Alves is not the only Campbellsville connection to the Portland club. He is working with Sean Bouthilette, another Tiger. Bouthilette, of Elizabethtown, signed with Kentucky out of high school but transferred to Campbellsville. Tiger assistant coach Chris Lewis also works with the Portland team.

When Alves matriculated to Campbellsville, his ambition was to play four years and earn a degree in sports management. His focus shifted a bit this year when he worked on Coach Beauford Sanders' staff.

He's learning even more about coaching in Portland. "I have learned a lot about baseball that goes unnoticed," he says. "Like budgeting, scheduling, tournaments, field work and how to deal with parents and players.

"I am especially learning more about the game from Joe Taylor, the owner and director of the Portland Baseball Club. I have spent a lot of time with him and have had a great time learning from someone who has the same philosophy I do."

And while the kids he coaches might dream of stepping into the batters box at Safeco Field, just up the road in Seattle, Alves' dreams have changed too.

"I definitely can see myself coaching after I graduate in May, 2013," Alves says. "My goal is to possibly get a graduate assistant job with Coach Chris Lewis whenever he gets a head job. ... That is another year away and a lot of things can happen before then.

"My goal is to reach a head coaching job at the Division I level. Watching the College World Series and being a big UK fan, it shows how some programs can be turned around.

"That is something I would want to do."

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE
The Anderson County Fiscal Court will receive sealed bids until July 2, 2012 at 4 p.m. on #2 Diesel Fuel including installation on a 1000 gallon tank and pump, for the Ambulance Service located at 1191 Bypass South, Lawrenceburg, KY 40342. A copy of the bid specifications can be obtained at the Anderson County Judge/Executive's Office (Cheryl Peach) located at 137 South Main Street, Lawrenceburg, KY 40342. The Fiscal Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids. The Fiscal Court also reserves the right to waive defect and informalities in proposals or to accept any proposal as may be deemed to its interest.

A PROPOSED ORDINANCE RELATING TO THE AMENDMENT OF THE ANDERSON COUNTY ZONE ORDINANCE AND MAP ORDINANCE NO. 2012-4 SUMMARY
Be it ordained by the Anderson Fiscal Court, Commonwealth of Kentucky:

SECTION 1
The Anderson Fiscal Court has considered the record before the Lawrenceburg/Anderson County, Kentucky Joint Planning Commission in its Docket 12-001 including the record of the public hearing held by the Planning Commission on April 10, 2012 and the actions and recommendation of the Planning Commission and its staff as set out in the minutes of its April 10, 2012 meeting. The Anderson Fiscal Court concurs in and adopts the reasons and findings of the Planning Commission for said zoning change and approves and accepts the recommendations of the Commission in this matter as set out in its minutes.

SECTION II
More specifically, the Anderson Fiscal Court concurs in the findings of the Planning Commission and adopts said findings as its own.

SECTION III
Therefore the Zoning Map of Anderson County, Kentucky is hereby amended as it affects the property described here in from A-1 (Agricultural District) to I-1 (Light Industrial District). The property so rezoned, owned by Wild Turkey check, the Special Master Commissioner shall take from the purchaser(s) by cashier's or certified check the sum of 10% down and a good and sufficient bond with surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner payable to the Special Master Commissioner for the balance of said purchase price, and bearing interest from date of sale at the rate of 12% per annum until paid in full.

Each tract or parcel of real estate shall be sold subject to the following:

A. All ad valorem real estate taxes currently due for which the purchaser(s) shall receive no credit against the purchase price;
B. Easements, restrictions, stipulations and agreements of record in the Office of the Clerk of the County Court of Anderson County, Kentucky;
C. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property;
D. Any facts which an inspection and accurate survey of the property may disclose; and
E. Any and all planning and zoning regulations imposed upon the subject property.

SALE NO. 1:
The amount of money to be raised is the sum of $132,318.73 plus interest and costs as set out in a Judgment and Order of Sale of the Anderson Circuit Court dated May 24, 2012.
SALE NO. 2:
The amount of money to be raised is the sum of $81,497.26 plus interest and costs as set out in a Judgment and Order of Sale of the Anderson Circuit Court dated May 24, 2012.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S NOTE
All prospective purchasers are advised to fully understand and consider the following:
1. All properties are sold strictly as is, with no warranties expressed or implied. Properties shall be sold inside the front door of the Courthouse or on the steps thereof, weather and traffic noise permitting. No prior inspections are arranged by the Court or the Special Master Commissioner in that properties are often occupied as of day of sale.
2. Risk of loss to improvements to real estate shifts to purchaser as of date of sale. Insurance should be placed immediately by successful bidder.
3. All properties sold for less than two-thirds of appraised value subject to current owner statutory right of redemption pursuant to Kentucky Revised Statutes.

4. Rights of possession given to purchasers with deed, but holdover occupants of real estate may require additional Court action by purchaser to acquire actual possession.

5. Master Commissioner's deed warrants title only so far as authorized by the judgment, orders and proceedings of the Court, but no further. Independent title examination by successful purchaser is recommended prior to confirmation of sale.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE
In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, June 28, 2012, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts hereinafter set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):
(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay the purchase price in full, or make a deposit of at least ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the unpaid balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and immediately furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest at twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.
(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent, unless a Certificate of Delinquency has been recorded in the Anderson County Clerk's Office and the holder of that Certificate is a party to the action.
(3) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.
(4) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.
